

Answers:

Q1. Explain what they suggest might be different in practice patterns between female and male physicians using 40 to 50 words.

Female physicians' gender-specific contributions might be found in patient-centered empathetic communication, psychosocial counseling, preventive care, and disease management. Female physicians are also more likely than their male counterparts to care for underserved communities, be effective team players, and err on the side of caution rather than take risks.

Q2. Choose the most appropriate option below to fill (Q2)

B

- A. that
- B. in order to
- C. for
- D. in

Q3. Describe what "this problem" is using 20 to 30 words.

When physician payment rates are based on relative weights per physician service unit, the male-dominated surgical specialties are better compensated than the medical specialties.

Q4. Describe what "It" represents using 5 to 10 words.

Shifting to a more gender-diverse construct of physicianhood

Q5. Explain what "such awareness" represents using 5 to 10 words.

The traditional construct of physician identity is male-gendered.